

Uniwersytet
Wrocławski

Written in Bones

Studies on technological and social contexts
of past faunal skeletal remains

edited by
Justyna Baron
Bernadeta Kufel-Diakowska

Uniwersytet Wrocławski
Instytut Archeologii

Wrocław 2011

INSTITUTE OF ARCHAEOLOGY, UNIVERSITY OF WROCLAW, 2011

Editors

Justyna Baron and Bernadeta Kufel-Diakowska

Reviewers

Arkadiusz Marciniak, Jarosław Wilczyński

Layout

Janusz M. Szafran, Jarosław Michalak

Cover

Justyna Baron

© Institute of Archaeology, University of Wrocław and individual authors 2011

ISBN 978-83-61416-64-7

Wrocławska Drukarnia Naukowa PAN im. Stanisława Kulczyńskiego Sp. z o.o.
53-505 Wrocław, ul. Lelewela 4

Contents

Preface	5
----------------------	---

Methods and methodology

Steven P. Ashby The Language of the Combmaker: interpreting complexity in Viking-Age Industry	9
Elisabeth A. Stone The Role of Ethnographic Museum Collections in Understanding Bone Tool Use	25

Materials and technology

Aline Averbouh, Jean-Marc Pétilion Identification of “debitage by fracturation” on reindeer antler: case study of the Badegoulian levels at the Cuzoul de Vers (Lot, France)	41
Bárbara Avezuela Aristu, Esteban Álvarez-Fernández, Jesús Jordá Pardo, Emilio Aura Tortosa The barnacles: A new species used to make a Gravettian suspended object from Nerja Cave (Málaga, Spain)	53
Benjamin Marquebielle Mesolithic bone tools in Southwestern Europe: the example of the French site of “Le Cuzoul de Gramat”	63
Stefan Pratsch Mesolithic antler artefacts in the North European Plain	79
Marcin Diakowski Bone and antler artefacts from Pobiel 10, Lower Silesia, Poland. Are they really Mesolithic?	93
Selena Vitezović The Neolithic Bone Industry from Drenovac, Serbia	117
Erika Gál Prehistoric antler- and bone tools from Kaposújlak-Várdomb (South-Western Hungary) with special regard to the Early Bronze Age implements	137
Peggy Morgenstern Typical hide working tools from the late Bronze Age of Moldova	165
Corneliu Beldiman, Diana-Maria Sztancs, Viorica Rusu-Bolindeț, Irina Adriana Achim Skeletal technologies, metal-working and wheat harvesting: ancient bone and antler anvils for manufacturing saw-toothed iron sickles discovered in Romania	173

Katrin Struckmeyer
The bone tools from the dwelling mound Feddersen Wierde, Germany, and their functions	187
Marloes Rijkeljkhuizen
Dutch medieval bone and antler combs	197
Hans Christian Küchelmann
Whale Bones as architectural elements in and around Bremen, Germany	207
Marloes Rijkeljkhuizen
Large or small? African elephant tusk sizes and the Dutch ivory trade and craft	225
Bernadeta Kufel-Diakowska
The Hamburgian Zinken perforators and burins – flint tools as evidence of antler working	233

Social contexts

Heidi Luik, Mirja Ots, Liina Maldre
From the Neolithic to the Bronze Age: continuity and changes in bone artefacts in Saaremaa, Estonia	243
Florentina Oleniuc, Luminița Bejenaru
Preliminary Data Concerning the Manufacturing of Animal Raw Materials in the Chalcolithic Cucuteni B Settlement of Poduri-Dealul Ghindaru, Romania	263
Manuel Altamirano García
Bone industry from the Bronze Age in Central Iberia. The Settlement of La Motilla Del Azuer	273
Justyna Baron
Ritual contexts of animal bone deposits from the Roman Iron Age settlement at Magnice, SW Poland	285
Felix Lang
Activity not Profession. Considerations about Bone Working in Roman Times	295
Magdalena Konczewska
Bone, horn and antler working in medieval Wrocław	305
Kamilla Pawłowska
The remains of a late medieval workshop in Inowrocław (Kuyavia, Poland): horncores, antlers and bones	313
Authors' Adresses	321